

gift as they grow in their faith.

Picture: Keith Blundy

We need to encourage people along a journey that starts with ‘how much of my money do I give away?’ to ‘how much of God’s money do I keep?’. It’s not an easy or straightforward journey. Our relationship with money is.... complicated. We often struggle to talk about how we feel about money, and how we spend what we have. It can feel intrusive, and many people feel guilty and/or confused about giving so would really prefer to think and talk about something else. So we need patience, kindness and love when encouraging people’s generosity, and to provide people with the space and time to explore what God may be asking them to do.

We all learn in different ways and so we need to offer as many ways as possible for people to explore God’s generosity towards them, and the generosity he is calling us to show to others.

Text Search

Sort by

Title A -> Z?

Apply

1.

Group study resources

People are hugely influenced by what others do, and so group study resources can be really helpful in developing a shared generous culture.

2.

Individual study resources

Individual study resources enable people to go at their own pace, and in private. They explore generosity in many different ways, and vary in length.

3.

Preaching resources

Preaching and teaching on God's generosity is an important part of the discipleship mix. There are numerous resources available to help create sermons on generosity, with a wide variety of examples of sermons for different traditions and contexts

4.

Retreats

Sometimes you may want to take a more focussed approach to giving and generosity within you church context. A retreat is a great way of doing this with a small group or leadership team and can be done in a wide variety of settings.

Source URL: <https://www.churchofengland.org/resources/building-generous-church/encouraging-generosity/discipleship-materials>